To All The Respected Dharmacharyas

Just as a stagnant pool of water, after a period of time, becomes fetid and putrid a religious philosophy that is insulated from fresh air and oxygen becomes a breeding ground for evil thoughts and actions. Hinduism, which is thousands of years old, has never had a significant reformist movement. I believe the new millenium now offers Hinduism an opportunity to change its ancient and orthodox ways to bring unity and harmony among its believers.

An ideal religion is one that fosters love, respect, understanding, acceptance and appreciation among all its believers without distinction. Any form of prejudice or discrimination against anyone for whatever reason is uncivilized behavior. We don't accept such behavior politically or socially so there is no reason why we should accept it in religion.

It is my prayer to the power that informs and inspires all of us that you, the Wise protectors of our Faith, will use your power and your wisdom to bring about the reforms that are long overdue.

With respectful pranams,
